

Tesla Fire at Carnegie SVRA

On Wednesday, August 19 the Tesla fire began at the western boundary of the state property around 2:30 p.m. Afternoon winds pushed the fire east to the park, burning 2,700 acres across the Tesla and Alameda properties, and a small section of the SVRA.

Luckily, only 65 acres of land in the riding area burned. The affected area is the western edge of the park, stretching from the creek to the southern boundary and west of Pottery Loop.

Now that the fire is out the land needs time to recover. In the months to come Carnegie staff and partners will be working hard to restore riding opportunities. The burned area will remain closed until all damage is evaluated and rehabilitation of trails and habitat is complete. The green line on the map below is the burn area, which will be rehabilitated.

Riding on or in burned areas is strictly prohibited. All riders must stay out of the burned area until it is reopened.

For more information, please contact the park at (925) 447-9027.

Pink area is temporarily closed until burn area can be fenced. Entering this area is strictly prohibited.
